MSc or PhD position available: Assessing wildlife community dynamics in Indigenous protected areas of the Northwest Territories, Canada

Brief description: The Wildlife Coexistence Lab (WildCo) at the University of British Columbia, K’asho Got’į̨nę, Fort Good Hope Renewable Resources Council and Guardians of Fort Good Hope, Government of the Northwest Territories (GNWT), and Government of Canada (Canadian Wildlife Service, CWS) are seeking an outstanding graduate student to start a two year MSc or a four year PhD position in January 2021. The key motivation for this position is to work with local project partners to develop an effective monitoring approach for boreal wildlife communities, and to provide recommendations for their future management. See the full advert for further details.

Deadline: Send an email by June 21, 2020 to c.w.beirne@ubc.ca with the Subject: “WildCo MSc/PhD position in Northwest Territories: Your Name” and include the following details: a) a brief statement of interest, b) Curriculum Vitae, and c) academic transcripts (copies sufficient at this stage).