

I am seeking a motivated student interested in pursuing a PhD focussed on Rocky Mountain forest dynamics at University of Northern Colorado. We will be resampling several plots within and around Rocky Mountain National Park to examine changes over approximately 50 years. This will be a fully funded PhD, complete with tuition waiver and stipend and guaranteed for four years. I am looking for students with some skills in multivariate analyses, GIS, and/or R programming. Additionally, I would prefer someone with knowledge of local plant identification and/or plant trait data collection.
